Building the practice of arbitration in Canada

With the support of CanArbWeek and the assistance of FTI Consulting, we are leading a survey of Canadian arbitration practitioners, including arbitration counsel, arbitrators and tribunal assistants, and experts, to compile a profile of commercial arbitration in Canada for the Canadian Arbitration Report 2023.

Arbitration in Canada and Canada's arbitration community are growing and there is strong potential for future growth. To support this growth, it will help to know more about the state of arbitration in Canada and the factors likely to affect its future.

The results will be useful to many stakeholders:

- arbitration counsel, arbitrators, and tribunal assistants, in advancing their practices and providing better service to their clients and to disputing parties;
- experts and other service providers in supporting arbitration practitioners and arbitrations;
- corporate counsel in planning and contracting for their clients' dispute resolution; and
- academics in studying and teaching in the field.

The Survey Report will document the practice of domestic and international commercial arbitration by individuals and businesses based in Canada; and it will point the way forward for us to build the practice of arbitration. The Report will be available for everyone to use, without charge.

The survey is voluntary and strictly confidential. Your responses will be anonymized by the survey group at FTI Consulting through a double-blind system. Those analyzing the data will not be able to identify the respondents in any way. Those in FTI Consulting who are involved in expert witness services will not have any access to data that identifies any of the respondents.

Who and what we are surveying

We are surveying all arbitration counsel, arbitrators and tribunal assistants, and experts involved in arbitration, who are based in Canada, wherever the parties are located, wherever the disputes arose, or wherever the arbitrations are seated or venued. This encompasses all commercial arbitration activity, including investor-state and sports arbitrations, taking place wholly or partly in the period from January 2020 onwards.
